

CHESTERFIELD COUNTY

Lifts Water Restrictions

Due to the recent rainfall, the water level at Lake Chesdin has been restored, leading the Appomattox River Water Authority to lift water restrictions.

As a member of the Appomattox River Water Authority, Chesterfield County also has lifted all water-use restrictions.

The Chesterfield County Board of Supervisors, County Administrator James J.L. Stegmaier and the Chesterfield County Department of Utilities appreciate the patience county water customers showed during the drought conditions. Even though water restrictions have been lifted, Chesterfield County officials would like to stress the importance of using water wisely. Water customers are encouraged to use the following tips:

- Repair leaks in faucets and toilets.
- Fully load washing machines and dishwashers before operating them.
- During the watering season, water established landscaping twice a week. When done properly, this is actually the most healthful for them.

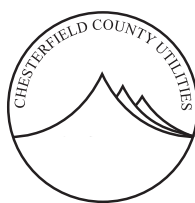

For more information about how to water, or how to measure the water used, contact the Chesterfield County office of Virginia Cooperative Extension at 804-751-4401.

Chesterfield County officials thank county water customers for their cooperation and support during drought conditions. We are reminded of the value of our drinking water supplies each time we enter into a period of drought and encourage our customers to continue to be mindful of this valuable resource and always use water wisely.

For more information customers may contact the Department of Utilities at 804-748-1271.
